XXIX. MISCELLANEOUS ARTICLES, CHIEFLY INTER-ESTING AS CURIOSITIES.

1. A. 1. An Indian bow. Three and a half feet in length, made of hickory.
Contributor and history unknown.

2. A. 2. An Indian War bow of the Yankton or the Sisseton - Upper Sioux. It is made of hickory; is three and a half feet in length, and possesses a double curve. It is stained red and is wrapped with red worsted near the middle, and each end is ornamented with blue ribbon. It is bound near one extremity, where it has been split, with some tendinous material.
Made by an Indian Prisoner at Ft. Ridgely.
Contributed by Asst. Surgeon Alf. Müller.

3. A. 3. A Kiawa bow, bow-case and quiver. The bow is fifty inches in length, made of Bois d'arc. The case and quiver are of Buffalo hide. These were picked up during the pursuit of the Indians, June 12, 1867, who stampeded the cavalry herd at Fort Dodge, Kansas.
Contributed by Asst. Surgeon C. S. De Graw, U.S.A.

4. A. 4. A Karajo bow from Fort Sumner, N.M. It is of hickory three and a half feet in length, bound at the middle and extremities with deer fibres, the cord is of the same material.
Contributed by Bvt. Maj. John Brooke, Asst. Surg. U.S.A.
5. A. 5. A Cheyenne Bow, hickory, out laid and bound at the middle and ends with deer fibres, three and a half feet in length. The bow case and quiver are bound with skin of a white wolf from Dakota Territory.
Contributed by Bvt. Maj. W.H. Forwood, Asst. Surg. U.S.A.
6. A. 6. An Ogalalla Sioux bow of Bois d'arc. Bow case and quiver of skin of calf, from Fort Laramie Dakota Territory.
Contributed by Bvt. Lt. Col. H.S. Schell, Asst. Surgeon, U.S.A.
7. A. 7. A Hoopa Indian Bow, made of cedar and covered with the skin of a rattlesnake. (Crotalus durissimus).
Contributed by Act. Asst. Surgeon P. Moffatt.

8. A. 8. A hickory arrow two feet in length, used by the Indians of Minnesota for killing small birds and by the boys for practice. It is stained red and is quite blunt being rectangular at the head. From Fort Ridgely.

Contributed by Act. Asst. Surgeon Alfred Miller, "

9. A. 9. A hickory arrow two feet in length, with the head drawn out spike-shaped and stained red. It is used for killing the smaller birds and by the Indian boys for practice. From Fort Ridgely.

Contributed by Act. Asst. Surgeon Alfred Miller.

10. A. 10. A Yankton arrow, (Upper Sioux) also used by the Lower Sioux. In consequence of the constant intercourse of the different tribes of the Lower and Upper Sioux Indians, no specific character is found in the arrows, used by the several tribes, although the Yanktons and Sissetons, (Upper Sioux) prepare theirs in preference with yellow colored feathers. The shaft is about twenty-two inches in length, and one-fourth of an inch in diameter. From about three inches from the extremity three irregular longitudinal grooves run down to the feathers. These grooves are possibly to permit the escape of blood, so that the wounded animal may be tracked. Beyond that they have no known significance. The feathered portion is between nine and ten.

inches in length. The arrow-head is of iron and spear-shaped, being in this specimen one inch broad at the base and nearly two inches in length. The edges of the head are grooved and somewhat sharpened. The head is held in a cleft of the shaft by means of tendinous bands that loosen when long moistened by the blood of the stricken prey.

Other arrow-heads used by the Sioux vary from this size to that of a breadth of five eighths of an inch by a length of nearly four inches. Contributed by Act. Asst. Surgeon Mf. Müller.

11. A. 11. A Yauktion or Sissiton (Upper Sioux) arrow. The yellow color of the inner side of the feather is characteristic. Contributed by Act. Asst. Surg. Mf. Müller.

12. A. 12. A variety of the Upper Sioux arrow. Contributed by Act. Asst. Surg. Mf. Müller.

13. A. 13. A Upper Sioux arrow, adopted by the Lower Sioux. Contributed by Act. Asst. Surg. Mf. Müller.

| 14. | A. | 14. | A Lower Sioux Arrow. Contributed by Act. Asst. Surg. Alf. Müller. |
| 15. | A. | 15. | A Sioux arrow, the particular designation of which has been mistaid. It does not however differ materially from the others. Contributed by Act. Asst. Surgeon Alf. Müller. |
| 16. | A. | 16. | A Lower Sioux Arrow. This specimen bears marks of service. Contributed by Act. Asst. Surg. Alf. Müller. |
| 17. | A. | 17. | A war arrow, from which the head is wanting, used by all the Sioux. The head was glued to the shaft in order to remain in the wound. Contributed by Act. Asst. Surgeon Alf. Müller. |
| 18. | A. | 18. | Two unused Upper Sioux arrows, from the neighborhood of Fort Wadsworth, Dakota Territory. The iron heads are undoubtedly of civilized manufacture, introduced among the Indians by traders. Contributed by Bvt. Maj. John S. Billings, Asst. Surgeon, U.S.A. |

19. A. 19. A stone arrow head, used by the Apache Indians of Arizona. It is attached to the shaft by cement which permits its disengagement in the wound. It is irregularly triangular, three fourths of an inch in its greatest length and one third in its greatest width, and has two notches as barbs on each of its long sides.
Contributed by Asst. Surgeon E. Cones, U.S. Army

20. A. 20 Two unused Upper Sioux arrows, from the neighborhood of Fort Madsen, Dakota Territory. The iron heads are undoubtedly of civilized manufacture, introduced among the Indians by traders.
Contributed by Bvt. Maj. John S. Billings, Asst. Surgeon, U.S.A.

21. A. 21. Fifteen Stoop Indian hickory arrows, thirteen of them have heads of various colored quartz, curiously barbed, and averaging an inch in length. Two have barbed steel heads, - all are thirty inches in length. The stone headed arrows are nearly all painted with alternate blue and red bands at both extremities of the shaft, and are feathered for six inches with black and white feathers. The two iron headed arrows are painted with black bands and have black feathers, these and and eight of the stone headed arrows, have irregular longitudinal grooves.

Contributed by Asst. Surgeon P. Moffatt. U.S.A.

22. A. 22. Four Navajo arrows made of hickory and iron headed, two feet in length, from Ft. Sumner, N.M.

Contributed by Bot. Maj. John Brooke, Asst. Surg. U.S.A.

23. A. 23. Indian iron Arrow-head.

Contributed by Act. Asst. Surgeon Alf. Müller.

24. A. 24. The point of a barbed arrow, shot by an Indian in the body of John Fincke, Aug. 18th 1862. between the fifth and sixth ribs, left side, near the vertebrae, and extracted two days afterwards. It was embedded one inch beneath the surface of the skin, having penetrated the lung.

Contributed by Act. Asst. Surgeon Alf. Müller.

25. A. 25. An iron arrow head, which had been embedded one inch in the ilium. It is three inches in its extreme length and half an inch in its widest part, it is neither distorted nor disfigured. Missile was extracted and Contributed by Asst. Surgeon B. A. Clements, U.S. Army.

26. A. 26. An iron arrow-head, removed from the scapula at the base of the spine. The missile, which is two inches in length and half an inch wide at the base, was greatly bent upon itself by the force of its impact.

Private — 5th U.S. Infantry: entered just above the posterior fold of the axilla; the shaft separated with the slightest traction: probing to the depth of two and a half inches failed to reveal it; after waiting three months, it was discovered, after an extensive T-shaped incision, and extracted by Asst. Surgeon B. A. Clements, U.S.A. Fort Tawantearay, N.M. 1861.
Contributed by the operator.

27. A. 27. An Apache iron arrow-head removed from the testicle of a Mexican herder, three months after the reception of the wound. The external wound is entirely healed over. Operator and Contributor, Bvt. Maj. A. H. Smith Assistant Surgeon. U.S.A.

28. A. 28. A typical Sioux war arrow; the head is deeply barbed and only fastened to the shaft with glue or slightly with ligament, and after a few minutes maceration in the fluids of the body becomes loose and remains when an attempt is made to withdraw the arrow by means of the shaft. Contributed by Bot. Lt. Col. W. S. Schell, Asst. Surgeon, U.S.A.

29. A. 29. Four arrows pulled from the bodies of men slain in the massacre at Ft. Phillip Kearney, December 1866. The one with a head is an ordinary hunting, showing that they are also sometimes used in war. Contributed by Bot. Lt. Col. W. S. Schell, Asst. Surg. U.S.A.

30. A. 30. An Arapahoe arrow, pulled from the body of a man who was scalped about two miles from Fort Laramie, Dakota Territory in June 1867. The arrow is distinguished by the deeper incision for the bowstring and the lesser amount of flare at the finger end of the shaft that occurs in the Sioux arrow and also by the absence of the longitudinal groovings which ornament the latter. Contributed by Bot. Lt. Col. W. S. Schell, Asst. Surgeon, U.S.A.

31. A. 31. A Sioux arrow pulled from the body of an ox which was shot in an attempt made by a party of Indians to run off the stock of a wagon train, on the road between Forts Laramie and Reno, May 1867. The head of the arrow, was stuck fast in the hip bone and was broken in pulling it out.
Contributed by Bt. Lt. Col. H. S. Schell, Asst. Surg. U.S.A.

32. A. 32. Five Sioux common hunting arrows; the head is securely fastened to the shaft so that the arrows may be pulled out of the body of an animal entire, and used again and again.
Contributed by Bt. Lt. Col. H. S. Schell, Asst. Surgeon, U.S.A.

33. A. 33. A Cheyenne arrow from Dakota Territory.
Contributed by Asst. Surgeon W. H. Forwood, U.S.A.

Contributed by Asst. Surgeon W. H. Forwood, U.S.A.

35. A. 35. An Arapahoe arrow taken from the body of a citizen killed near Fort Fletcher, Kansas, Jan. 1866.
Contributed by Asst. Surgeon W. H. Forwood, U.S.A.

36. A. 36. Two Sioux arrows taken from the bodies of citizens killed by the Indians at Downer's Station Kansas, January 1866.
Contributed by Asst. Surgeon W. H. Horwood, U.S.A.

37. A. 37. Two Kiawa arrows taken from the body of Private Spillman, B. 7th U.S. Cavalry, mortally wounded by Indians, June 12th 1867, at Fort Dodge, Kansas. On the morning of June 12th a party of Kiawa Indians dashed over the bluffs upon the cavalry herd grazing about a mile from the Post, (Fort Dodge) and getting between the herd and the Post succeeded in stampeding it down the river; herder Spillman was attacked by two Indians, who wounded him in three places; one slight in right shoulder, one in right side, the missile glancing from a rib and making a wound as one would make a stitch about three inches in length; and one through the right lumbar region penetrating into the abdominal cavity to a depth of about eight inches or more. The missile in side was removed by cutting the arrow in two and withdrawing the parts. In the right lumbar region it was removed with great difficulty. The wound being enlarged on either side of the shaft, and two fingers passed down immediately in contact with either angle of the iron head - serving both as a guide and protection - traction being made the arrow was withdrawn. The latter wound was mortal, the man dying next day at about 3 P.M.

Contributed by Asst. Surgeon C.S. De Graw, 2nd Maj. U.S. Army.

Contributed by 2nd Maj. C.S. De Graw, Asst. Surgeon, U.S.A.

40. B. 1. A Sioux war-spear principally used upon the bodies of the wounded to discover if they are still alive. The iron head is six inches in length, by two broad at the base and is bound by iron wire to a handle of light wood four feet in length. This handle is ornamented at intervals with plumage of birds, nearly all of which in this specimen is worn off. One of these spears belongs to each band and is held by the medicine-man, being inherited from father to son. It is only removed from the cloth in which it is wrapped during war time. It is said that no new ones are fabricated.
Contributed by Asst. Surgeon M. Müller.
